Announcement was made yesterday of | City and have the ceremony performed the marriage on May 27 of Miss Anna Meurer and Elmer Weber, both members of families socially prominent in Brooklyn. It was an elopement, aided and abetted by Miss Helen Gaynor, daughter of the late Mayor Gaynor.

The young couple are staying at the Hotel Biltmore now, and have been for a week, although for almost ten days after the marriage they were separated and had to stay with their fathers and mothers at their summer homes on Long Island, at points far removed from each other. Mrs. Weber told all about the marriage yesterday after she had made the formal

They both belonged to the Prospect Heights set, and met frequently. the other members of the Heights set are Miss Helen Gaynor and her sister Marion, who is now Mrs. Raiph Isham. When Mr. Weber and Miss Meurer, who is the daughter of Jacob Meurer, a dealer in metals, of 266 Lincoln place, Brooklyn, decided to get married, Miss Meurer redecided to get married, Miss Meurer re-membered all the fuss and feathers at-tendant upon the marriage of her sister Grace to Ira Richardson, Jr., a few months ago. Mr. Weber, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Weber of 101 Eighth avenue, Brooklyn, remembered that only last month his sister Elfrieda had been married to Henry Martin, son of Mrs. Thomas B. Martin of 20 Washington Park, Brooklyn, and his feelings in regard to large weddings were the same as those of his flances. Both wanted to avoid the ordeal of a fashionable wedding without letting any one know.

So on May 27 Mr. Weber brought his automobile around to the Gaynor home at 20 Eighth avenue, Brooklyn, where Miss Meurer was visiting, and she and Miss Helen Gaynor got into it. Mr. Weber, who is 21 years old, and was a student at Colgate University until last fall, drove them over to the home of the Rey, Har-

Then Mr. Weber's parents went to their summer home on Shelter Island, taking the son with them. There was voluminous correspondence between the two points, and Miss Meurer, a week ago last Thurs-day, packed her grip and came in to Brooklyn to pay a visit to Miss Gaynor. Mr. Weber came in about the same time. Then one day he called with his machine; his wife repacked her grip and the two of them came over to the Hotel Biltmore, where they have been ever since. "Have you been forgiven?" Mrs. Weber was asked yesterday.

"Yes, certainly!" she said.

SUMMER VISITORS

Fifty Paintings by Life Mem- Entertains Officers and Embers Shown at the National Arts Club.

WORK IS ARTISTS' BEST SEE MOVIES AND A SHOW

Another Interesting Show Is at Many Novel Entertainments the Snedecor Gallery in West 46th Street.

Two picture exhibitions recently opened for the benefit of visitors to the city during the summer months are well worth a visit of inspection.

At the National Arts Club fifty paintings, the work of life members of the club, have been placed on exhibition for the summer. Leon Dabo shows "The Bay From Staten Island" and "Approach of Night, St. Andrews," both of which are painted in his characteristic style, F. Luis Mora shows a portrait with the title "Black, Gray and Rose," as well as Pienic on the Hill."

Frederick Waugh is represented by a marine, "The Coast of St. Ann," which is marine, "The Coast of St. Ann," which is a marked contrast to the lyric note of "The Song of the Thrush," with its spring landscape as a background for the mother and child, by Edward Dufner. William Wendt has added a touch of remoteness and poetry to "The Lake," with its pseudo-classical treatment of the scene, while George Bellows's "Green Breaker" could never be accused of possessing any but the most modern feeling. The treatment is well suited to the subject. Guy Wiggins's "Madison Square" is a marked contrast to "The Menaure Cliffs, Ireland," of Robert Henri.

Some of the work of the members exhibits their talents at its best. This is some of the work of the members hibits their talents at its best. This is especially true of the "Devotion," by Henry Mosler, typified in the figure of the old woman saying her beads. The subject of the subject and religious picture by Mr. Mosof a second religious picture by Mr. Mos-ler, "The Prayer," is a young woman seen in the mystery of night. "Spring Plough-ing," by Jules Turcas, has all the fresh-ness of the early days of spring against the Canadian background. Albert Lucas is represented by "Winter," a figure in a snowstorm, and "Morning After the Storm," while "Winter Night" is a realis-tic contribution by Hobart Nichols. Other painters in the exhibition are Gifford Beal's "Palisades," William Rits-chel's "Children of the Desert." H. H. Nisof a second religious picture by Mr. Mos-

Then Mr. Weber's parents.

Gifford Beal's "Palisades," William Ritschel's "Children of the Desert," R. H. Nischel's "The Eve of St. John." Birge Harrison's "Soaring Clouds," Lillian Genthe's "In the Arbor," Cullen Yates's "Rising Fog" and Robert Vonnoh's portrait of his wife.

I Historically at least the most intersecting of the pictures at the summer than Mr. Weber's parents.

"Peace and Plenty," painted by George Inness in the early '50s, before the artist had attained the fame and its results that came to him so abundantly, later.

He was at that time associated with the dealer in whose gallery the picture is now to be seen. It was bought years ago by a banker living near New York and subsequently taken to California by als heirs. A landscape by Daubigny well represents the foreign painters, and rest of the pictures are by native artists. Ralph Blakelock is represented by a land-scape, and Edward Moran has a view of scape, and Edward Moran has a view of the waters of the bay looking from the Battery. D. W. Tryon's watercolor is this time "Glastonbury," and a vista of Venice in moonlight is painted by George H. Bogert. William M. Post, Théodore Rob-inson and Arthur Parton yre among the other artists whose work is exhibited.

ENTIRE BANK FORCE

ployees of National City at His Country Place.

Provided for Guests-Noted Persons There.

Frank W. Vanderlip invited the mem-bers of the National City Bank Club and their families to spend the day in his seventy-five acre front yard up at Scarborough-on-Hudson yesterday.

It took two special trains and half a dozen automobiles to transport the guests and after they got to the Vanderlip house there were moving pictures, a regular vaudeville show with trained dogs, Arab tumblers and trick shooting, several bands, a 40 by 100 foot dance boor under a big circus tent and 1,280 suppers cooked by the National City Bank chef and served al fresco. al fresco.

Geographically speaking, the party began at the front gate and wound its way up the path, through the rose hung pergola near the tea house, thence through the Colonial garden, at the end of which Mr. Vanderlip and his wife received the guests. There they scattered and were collected again only when the bugler an-nounced supper and time to go home. Officially—to omit the ride on the two specials from Grand Central—the party really began when the family almost pushed the moving picture man who took their picture back to the Hudson River in posing before the camera. Things hap-pened so quickly thereafter that one had to keep a good eye on the map for fear of missing something announced by the bugler while he—and she—were wandering about the swimming pool inspecting the old fashloned gardens and their several shady paths.

The guests were like happy school children, and that includes the young and those not so young. Among the especially happier ones were the vice-president of the bank, James T. Talbert. whose first appearance it was yesterday since he was stricken with para ysis in December.

The whole estate was turned over completely to the 500 employees of the bank who form the City Bank Club and their friends. The movies which were shown on a huge screen erected on the lawn did not start until dark, but there was danc-ing from 4 in the afternoon to 9 at night on the platform with one orchestra and on the lawn with the Seventy-first Regiment Band. To add to the beauty of the party several of the more perfect trees were strung with small electric lights. Besides there was a 12,000 can-dle power Peter Cooper H witt light, the largest electrical unit ever made, shining over the greensward at night.

B sides Mr. Vanderlip and Mr. Talbert among the officers present were Vice-Presidents Arthur H. Kavanaugh, William G. Simonson, John E. Gardine and Mrs.

VATERLAND ENDS ROUGH TRIP.

Biggest Liner Has No Trouble Dock-

ing on Second Visit. The huge Hamburg-American liner Vaterland arrived late yesterday afternoon on her second trip to this port after a rough trip. The ship left Hamburg on June 6, and Southampton and Cherbourg the following day. On the eighth she ran into heavy weather. The ship, however, did not roll an inch, according to several of the passengers. She made the 3,184 miles in 6 days, 1 hour and 40 minutes. In docking the great ship had much better success than on her earlier visit. when she consumed some three hours in warping into her slip. She arrived at the bar at 3:45 P. M., had no unusual delay at Quarantine and reached her pier at 7:15 P. M. An hour and a half later she was tucked in snugly and made fast.

Dr. Philip Rauer of Leipsic, creator of the department of hygiene known as "Der Mensch," arrived on the Vaterland, to prepare exhibits for the hygiene section of prepare exhibits for the hygiene section of the department of social economy of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.
